64 Cars Are 'Tagged' For Bad Parking Friday Night

Sixty-four Gettysburg residents learned this morning that it does not pay to park on the wrong side of the street, or in a restricted zone.

That number of cars were "tagged" by borough police for being parked on the wrong side of the street between about 1 and 5 o'clock this morning as they toured the town on their regular turns of duty.

Twenty-three of the cars were parked on the wrong side of W. Lincoln Ave., according to reports filed with the burgess at his office in the Fire Engine House.

Councilman Tagged
Many of the cars tagged were owned by students at Gettysburg College. One car was owned by a borough councilman.

While most of the cars tagged on W. Lincoln Ave., the "tagging" was carried out throughout the town — wherever cars were improperly parked.

Borough Policemen Paul Shealer and Clarence Cluck found two cars parked on the wrong side of Breckenridge St.; two on West St.; two on Springs Ave.; five on N. Stratton; four on Stevens; two on High; two on S. Washington; two on Steinwehr Ave.; four on N. Washington; one on E. Water; five on Fourth St.; six on E. Middle; two on Broadway and one on Franklin St.

One red ticket went to a person parked between 2 and 4 a.m. on a section of W. Middle where such overnight parking is prohibited.

Join $1 Club
Police pointed out the special effort was made to "enter those parked on the wrong side of the street into the borough's $1 club" because "such parking is exceedingly dangerous. It means that the person driving out from the curb has to cross two lanes of traffic to begin his journey," an officer said.

"We hope that the large number of tickets given out this morning will discourage the practice of parking on the wrong side of the street. Many near accidents and some minor accidents have resulted from parking on the wrong side of the street, and we hope to stop the practice before someone is badly hurt."

Authorities at the hospital, who said Miss Dorsey has been admitted as a patient there with several physical complaints two weeks ago, said the body was found by a night watchman on his rounds. She was dead when found.

Miss Dorsey, who had been in ill health for several years, had been seen last in her 10th floor room at the hospital about 4 a.m. by a nurse who had given her a backrub. A hospital official said Miss Dorsey apparently had jumped from a window opening off a porch near her room.

Blue And Gray Band Wins $75 First Prize In Parade

The Gettysburg Blue and Gray Band, which led the Gettysburg Fire Department in the parade Thursday afternoon in Scranton marking the climax of the 73rd annual State Firemen's Convention, won a $75 first prize in its own right, it was learned late Friday.

Word was received from Scranton too late to include the news in the columns of The Gettysburg Times Friday, which carried the news that the fire department's marching unit won first prize of $200 for the best appearing fire company with regulation firemen's uniforms, with not less than 40 men in line with band or drum corps of not less than 30 pieces.

The Blue and Gray was judged the best band of not less than 30 pieces in the parade, and won a first prize of $75, which brought the total joint winnings at Scranton to $275.

Forty firemen marched in the parade, and there were 32 members in the band section. Both prizes were won in the face of keen competition from many other units which competed in the two-hour long procession.

HANDICAPPED COUNTIANS CAN FILL GOOD JOBS

While the problem of employment for handicapped persons in Adams County is not as great as it may be elsewhere there are still a number of handicapped countians who would make good workers if given an opportunity.

Richard A. Mehring, York, assistant rehabilitation counselor for the state Bureau of Rehabilitation, said today.

Mehring made his report in connection with National Hire the Physically Handicapped Week which comes to an end today. "We annually celebrate a week during the year to call attention to the fact that the physically handicapped usually make the best workers when put in jobs they can do — but the problem is a 52 weeks in the year proposition," he said.

Twenty-five countians who were physically handicapped in one way or another were assisted by the Bureau of Rehabilitation during the last three years, Mehring said.

Cites Cases Helped
The assistance given by the bureau varied from counseling activities to helping establish a person in business. "The work consists in carrying out whatever has to be done," Mehring explained, adding "usually three or four agencies may help in the case of a single individual."

One New Oxford man was set up in the jewelry business as a result of training given to take advantage of skills he possessed despite his physical handicaps, and is now doing well in that business, Mehring reported.

An Abbottstown area youth was assisted through radio school and has become an expert repairman. A Gettysburg R. D. man was sent for special training at a school and is now employed at York. Several youths have been or are being assisted in obtaining college educations to develop special skills in order to make a successful life despite handicaps. One Littlestown area girl was trained as a nurse, Mehring said, and is successful despite a physical handicap.

"Most Dependable"
Mehring said his bureau had assisted in making possible operations in several instances which cured or lessened physical handicaps of county persons. In some cases it has assisted in the procurement of artificial limbs.

In the year-around job of aiding physically handicapped persons, the Bureau of Rehabilitation, Department of Public Assistance, Pennsylvania State Employment Service, Veterans Administration and other agencies work together, according to the case, to assist in (Continued on Page 2)

"The small flocks were composed of 10 or 15 birds," she said, "but the larger ones numbered 50 or 60 geese."

This is the first report of "wild geese flying" this season.

Says GOP Won't Find Red Skeleton In Its Closet

ERIE, Pa., (P)—The Republican party is not afraid of finding any "Communist skeletons in its closet," Sen. Richard M. Nixon told a GOP rally last night as he wound up a two-day whistle stop campaign through Pennsylvania.

In speech after speech, the vice presidential nominee hammered away at Communists and administration foreign policy. Police estimated a foot-stomping audience of 3,500 jammed Gannon Hall at Erie to hear Nixon's final address before his campaign special moved into New York State.

Reviewing the Alger Hiss and Whitaker Chambers cases at length, the California senator asserted:

"The record of the Truman administration in the Hiss case alone is enough to disqualify the Truman administration or its successor at Washington."

Nixon said the State Department's loyalty board program "is a farce" and promised that he'll add to the statement before he finishes the campaign. He went on:

"There's a way to get rats without burning down the barn. But we're not going to lock the door so the rats can't get out. We're going to go in there and get the rats."

Nixon referred to Secretary of State Dean Acheson as "Harry Truman's architect of striped pants confusion," a diplomat "who manages to lose for the free world half the continent of Asia and one-fifth of the entire globe's population."

Gettysburg Joint Board Will Meet

VETS MAY BE ELIGIBLE FOR COMPENSATION

Veterans recently discharged from the armed forces may be eligible for Veterans' Unemployment Compensation on and after October 15, according to an announcement today by Mrs. Eva Bower, acting manager of the Gettysburg office of the Pennsylvania State Employment Service.

VUC benefits, roughly similar to unemployment payments for World War II veterans under the GI Bill of Rights, were recently set up for veterans of the Korean fighting and other veterans who served on and after June 27, 1950. Title IV of the Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act of 1952 provided VUC benefits of $26 a week for a maximum of 26 weeks for jobless veterans who meet requirements of the law, including provisions of the applicable state law.

In filing a claim for VUC benefits at the local office veterans must satisfy eligibility requirements of the Pennsylvania Unemployment Compensation Law. Mrs. Bower pointed out. These include registering for a job, being able to work and available for work, and serving the regular one-week waiting period. Veterans are ineligible for any week in which they can draw benefits of $26 or more under the State Unemployment Compensation Program or the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act. If the veteran is eligible for less than $26 under the State or Railroad jobless benefit system, he may receive the difference between that amount and $25 in VUC benefits.

Veterans are not eligible for VUC benefits until after their mustering-out pay period expires and cannot claim VUC for any week in which they receive education, training or subsistence allowances. Mrs. Bower stated. She also explained the veteran must have served 90 continuous days in the armed forces with at least one day on or after June 27, 1950, and must have been discharged or released under conditions other than dishonorable.

Veterans who are unemployed because they cannot find a suitable job and who meet the eligibility requirements may file a claim for VUC on or after October 15, and Mrs. Bower urged such veterans to visit the local State Employment Service office promptly after that date because the PSES office may be able to refer him to a suitable job. The staff of the local office will provide information on VUC benefits or other phases of the Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act upon request.

Enemy Drives UN Force From White Horse Mountainside

By STAN CARTER

SEOUL, Korea (P)—Chinese Reds swept back up the north slope of White Horse mountain through intense Allied tank and warplane fire today and pushed weary South Koreans off the crest in savage hand-to-hand combat.

Far to the north, U. N. Sabre jet pilots shot down six Communist MIG jets.

The battle for strategic White Horse, dominating the Chorwon road net into South Korea, passed its 70th hour of almost continuous fighting. The hill has changed hands more than 20 times.

Ninth Division South Koreans, whose motto is "Stay Fight," were making a new stand only 200 yards from the crest.

Reports from the front were sketchy. It was not known here whether the attack was made by 16,000 Chinese troops which earlier had been reported massed for a fresh assault.

Win 2-Hour Fight
The Chinese launched their attack at 4:15 p. m. and won control of the crest at 6:30 p. m.

The South Koreans, in a bold maneuver, had won the hill only a few hours earlier at 12:30 p. m. They circled White Horse below the crest, charged from all sides and killed or drove off all but two small pockets of Chinese.

Tanks manned by South Koreans rumbled into the valley that winds north of White Horse. They turned their big rifles on a nearby hill which the Chinese have used as a spigboard for assaults on White Horse.

But the maneuver did not stop the Reds for long.

Before launching Operation Iron Fist that won back White Horse, the weary but determined ROKs fought off seven fanatical human-wave attacks against their positions on three slopes of the hill. They routed the bugle-blowing, screaming Chinese in fierce, close-quarter fighting.

FINE AND AFL DISAGREE OVER PA. TAX SURVEY

HARRISBURG (AP)—Gov. John S. Fine and leadership of the AFL-Pennsylvania Federation of Labor disagreed today over the withdrawal of PFL representation on a state tax advisory committee.

Fine has said the federation evaded a responsibility when it withdrew its representative, Earl C. Bohr, AFL secretary-treasurer, last week.

AFL "Willing"

James A. McDevitt, president of the state AFL group, replied yesterday that the federation was "ready and willing" to join in the tax study "if and when there is an indication of a sincere desire to find an equitable solution to the tax mess."

The tax advisory committee was established by Gov. Fine to survey the tax situation on the state level for action by the 1953 legislature. "It is unfortunate that the labor organizations will try to run out on a tax study when they could contribute something to the work of that study and do the right thing by their membership," Fine commented.

Hit "Stone Wall"

McDevitt said that the federation's executive council ordered Earl C. Bohr, AFL secretary-treasurer, to resign from the committee because "we were running up against a stone wall."

"We wanted to know specifically what is now being taxed, what exemptions are granted and exactly how much is being received in tax money," McDevitt said, adding:

"After a sufficient amount of time we learned that all the material essential for a proper evaluation was not made available to us."

More Taxes Than Buttons
"There are more hidden taxes in Pennsylvania than you have buttons on a suit."

The AFL, which claims a membership of nearly 800,000 AFL union members in Pennsylvania, voted unanimously at its 1951 convention to oppose any state wage or sales tax.

McDevitt added that "in my opinion this (tax study) committee will wind up by recommending either a wage or sales tax or both."

A one-half of one per cent flat income tax recommended by Fine died in a Senate committee in the 1951 General Assembly after passing the House. As much as 140 million dollars in additional revenue is expected to be sought from the 1953 legislature.

McDevitt announced that the federation's executive council approved the AFL's endorsement of the Democratic national ticket of Gov. Adlai Stevenson for president and Sen. John J. Sparkman for vice-president.

CLAIM PHOTO IN TIMES WAS ABE LINCOLN

The picture in question, believed taken at Hanover Junction, Pa., was published in The Gettysburg Times on October 4, in connection with its series of articles on the history of early railroads in Adams County.

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Western Maryland Railway, in the process of celebrating its 100th birthday, has unearthed from the National Archives in Washington a picture that may give Lincoln scholars reason to reconsider one of their theories.

It has been pretty well agreed among them that the Great Emancipator was never photographed either at or on his way to Gettysburg, Pa., the scene of his most famous address.

But a picture taken in 1863 by Matthew Brady, Civil War photographer and Lincoln portraitist, is being billed by some lovers of Lincoln lore as a shot of a group which includes the president at Hanover Junction, Pa., en route to Gettysburg.

John Lippy Jr., Gettysburg man and Lincoln hobbyist, says he is certain the tall figure in a stovepipe hat is the famous president.

Season, Hour Jibe
Shadows indicate the time of day would be shortly before sunset. The season and hour jibe since Lincoln made his famous speech in November and would have passed through Hanover Junction about 5 p. m. or so, according to records of his trip.

The tall man in the photo has side whiskers like Lincoln wore, and the fact that the pictures was made at all by the famed Brady would indicate an event of some importance in Hanover Junction history.

Miss Josephine Cobb, chief of the national archives still pictures division, isn't so sure.

She does agree, however, that the picture was filed in the wrong category for years. In 1950, Miss Cobb became suspicious of the filing which labeled the shot as a Hanover Junction, Va., picture.

She noted some of the men were wearing items of Northern army uniform and didn't think that likely in Virginia in the year 1863 when the Civil War was still going on. A check of landmarks showed the picture actually was taken at Hanover Junction, Pa.

On Saturday, Oct. 18, Western Maryland Railway will stage a pageant and re-enactment of the Gettysburg Address. The railroad carried Lincoln part way to the battlefield site for his oration there.

History research experts describe the "chandelier" crown that belonged to the Visigothic King Recenswinth (649-672 A.D.) as "studded with jewels the size of robins' eggs and surrounded with long pendants set with precious stones." The magnificent superstructure was suspended on a long chain which connected it with the main body of the crown and provided further opportunity for the imaginative flight of the royal jeweler's fancy.

When he married Princess Anna in 988 A.D., the crown given Vladimir the Great of Russia by the Byzantine Emperor looked like a palace dome that had been finely engraved and set with precious stones the size of fat plums. ## Warriors Wallop Waynesboro 40-13 To Gain League Lead Gettysburg High School stepped right back into the thick of the scrap for the South Penn Football Conference title Friday night as it laced the hapless Waynesboro High outfit 40-13 while Hanover and Hershey suffered upsets. In fact the Warriors are the present leaders although Chambersburg is unbeaten.

Chambersburg's 13-0 triumph over Hershey and Mechanicsburg's 12-6 win at Hanover leaves the Chambersburg team as the only unbeaten team in the conference and creates a six-team scrap for the championship now held by the Warriors.

Coach Howard Shoemaker's Warriors opened Friday's tilt with a vengeance and actually sewed up the contest in the first three and one-half minutes of play with two touchdowns after which they breezed along easily before a hopelessly outclassed Tornado.

The game, which was witnessed by a scant crowd of about 1,500 due to the threatening weather and the prospects of a one-sided affair, opened with Paul Carson kicking off to Wayne Tonsel who returned the boot from his 15 to the 27.

Six-Play TD
Six plays later the Warriors tallied on an uninterrupted touchdown drive. On two tries Bobby Miller made a first down on the 38. Miller then circled left end for a first down on the visitors' 42. Wayne Tonsel followed with a 9-yard dash around left end and Miller picked up a first down on the 28. "Skip" Fisel then fired the first of two touchdowns-passes when he whipped an aerial to Stanton Musser on the 5 from where he raced over. Bill Knox booted the first of his four extra points.

Just two minutes later the Warriors had another TD. Knox booted to P. Carson who returned to his 25. A line plunge by Washington was good for but a yard. On the next play Richie Carter, husky GHS tackle, pounced on a Tornado fumble on the Waynesboro 22. Bobby Miller shot around left end on the next play to go the entire way and again Knox added the point.

Early in the second period Bobby Rohrbaugh, an excellent performer during the evening, intercepted a pass on the Gettysburg 10 to halt a mild Tornado threat. Two plays later Fisel punted out and the ball was returned by Potts to the Gettysburg 44.

Skinner Steals Pitchout
One of the most startling plays of the game then took place. Attempting a pitchout, Waynesboro found the ball intercepted by Big Jim Skinner who ran 38 yards to score unopposed. Knox's extra point kick was wide.

After Tonsel returned a Waynesboro punt to his 44, the Warriors marched 56 yards for their fourth tally midway in the second stanza. Rohrbaugh and Miller picked up a first down on the invaders' 35 on two running plays and Tonsel followed with a right end sweep for another first down on the 15. The Tornado batted down a pass and despite a fumble Miller picked up three yards. Fisel passed to Musser to move the ball to the 6 and then Fisel made it a first down on the 2 on a quarterback sneak. Miller raced around right end to score on the next play. Knox kicked the point.

Knox Intercepts
A short time later Bill Knox made the first of his two pass interceptions by snaring the ball on the Gettysburg 45 and galloping to the Waynesboro 18. However, a fumble was recovered by Waynesboro on the 24 to end the threat.

Waynesboro struck through the air for its initial TD. Ruppert fired a long pass to Dunne which was good for a first down on the Waynesboro 41. Ruppert followed with a long heave to Paul Carson who got behind the Gettysburg defenders and took the ball on the 30 from where he scampered over. The pass on the extra point try was bad and fumbled but Carson picked up the ball and got around end for the point.

There was no scoring in the third period but in the closing seconds of the period the fifth Gettysburg TD was set up when Fisel fired a long pass from the Waynesboro 40 to Jim Skinner on the 5, the latter being forced out of bounds on the 1.

After two plays had lost three yards, Fisel shot an aerial to Skinner who was waiting in the end zone. Knox's boot for the point was wide.

Coach Shoemaker dipped deep into his reserve squad to finish the game and the scrubs came through in nice style by tallying again and then yielding a Tornado score in the final few seconds of play.

Livingston Goes Over
Midway in the game John Carter intercepted a short pass over the center of the line on the Waynesboro 12. Chick Livingston took the ball on the next play and scooted through right tackle to score. Knox added his final point with a placement.

After being pushed back to their own 15 via a penalty, the Warrior reserves were forced to punt and the ball was brought back to the 15. Larry Provand smashed to the 8 and then smashed over on the next try. Carson's boot for the point was low.

Jay Schmitt, Bobby Rohrbaugh, Bill Knox and John Carter turned in heads-up ball with interceptions and recovered fumbles while the rest of the regulars played their usual fine games. The Warrior forward wall of Skinner, R. Carter, Dayhoff, Peters, Musser, Knox and Schmitt left little to be desired. Miller and Tonsel time and again ripped off nice runs while Fisel

Coach Shoemaker dipped deep into his reserve squad to finish the game and the scrubs came through in nice style by tallying again and then yielding a Tornado score in the final few seconds of play.

Midway in the game John Carter intercepted a short pass over the center of the line on the Waynesboro 12. Chick Livingston took the ball on the next play and scooted through right tackle to score. Knox added his final point with a placement.

After being pushed back to their own 15 via a penalty, the Warrior reserves were forced to punt and the ball was brought back to the 15. Larry Provand smashed to the 8 and then smashed over on the next try. Carson's boot for the point was low.

Jay Schmitt, Bobby Rohrbaugh, Bill Knox and John Carter turned in heads-up ball with interceptions and recovered fumbles while the rest of the regulars played their usual fine games. The Warrior forward wall of Skinner, R. Carter, Dayhoff, Peters, Musser, Knox and Schmitt left little to be desired. Miller and Tonsel time and again ripped off nice runs while Fisel turned in some excellent passing. Provand and Ruppert were outstanding for the visitors.

Gettysburg collected 15 first downs to nine for Waynesboro. The Warriors completed three of seven aerials while Waynesboro made good on four of 19, four of which were intercepted.

Early in the second period Bobby Rohrbaugh, an excellent performer during the evening, intercepted a pass on the Gettysburg 10 to halt a mild Tornado threat. Two plays later Fisel punted out and the ball was returned by Potts to the Gettysburg 44.

One of the most startling plays of the game then took place. Attempting a pitchout, Waynesboro found the ball intercepted by Big Jim Skinner who ran 38 yards to score unopposed. Knox's extra point kick was wide.

After Tonsel returned a Waynesboro punt to his 44, the Warriors marched 56 yards for their fourth tally midway in the second stanza. Rohrbaugh and Miller picked up a first down on the invaders' 35 on two running plays and Tonsel followed with a right end sweep for another first down on the 15. The Tornado batted down a pass and despite a fumble Miller picked up three yards. Fisel passed to Musser to move the ball to the 6 and then Fisel made it a first down on the 2 on a quarterback sneak. Miller raced around right end to score on the next play. Knox kicked the point.

A short time later Bill Knox made the first of his two pass interceptions by snaring the ball on the Gettysburg 45 and galloping to the Waynesboro 18. However, a fumble was recovered by Waynesboro on the 24 to end the threat.

Waynesboro struck through the air for its initial TD. Ruppert fired a long pass to Dunne which was good for a first down on the Waynesboro 41. Ruppert followed with a long heave to Paul Carson who got behind the Gettysburg defenders and took the ball on the 30 from where he scampered over. The pass on the extra point try was bad and fumbled but Carson picked up the ball and got around end for the point.

There was no scoring in the third period but in the closing seconds of the period the fifth Gettysburg TD was set up when Fisel fired a long pass from the Waynesboro 40 to Jim Skinner on the 5, the latter being forced out of bounds on the 1.

After two plays had lost three yards, Fisel shot an aerial to Skinner who was waiting in the end zone. Knox's boot for the point was wide.

Friday's Scores

Littlestown 19, Kennard-Dale 14.

Danny Barnes stole the show for the Littlestown Thunderbolts by accounting for all points as Clay Evans' outfit upset Dallastown 19-14 Friday night at Littlestown before approximately 1,500 fans to gain second place in the Laurel Conference.

Early in the opening period Barnes got away on a 48-yard run before being forced out of bounds on the Dallastown 1. He plunged over on the next play. His kick for the point was low.

After a scoreless second period which was marked by fumbles and during which play was confined mostly to midfield, Barnes got away on two long TD runs in the third period to clinch the decision for the Bolts.

60-Yard TD Run
His first of the period came on a dash of 60 yards after he had broken through the left side of the line. Barnes added the point on a placement.

A short time later he again shot through the left side and streaked 58 yards. His boot for the point was no good.

Dallastown took to the air in the final period to put on a strong finish.

Tally on Passes
After Ritz intercepted a Littlestown aerial on the Dallastown 39, Ritz passed to Snyder for 20 yards and followed with another pass to the same lad for a 31-yard TD play. Strickler booted the extra point.

Ritz hit Snyder on three more passes late in the period for the second score. The first pass was good for 51 yards to put the ball on the 30. The next moved the ball to the 10 from where Snyder took a pass in the end zone and again Strickler converted.

Littlestown took the following kickoff and returned to midfield where Dallastown recovered a fumble as the game ended.

Littlestown gained 10 first downs to their opponents' 7. The Bolts completed one of eight passes while Dallastown made good on seven of 10.

PAINTER AT WORK AGAIN
I glance from my library window and note new colorings creeping in to the Summer green. As I wait in the Springtime for the first bursting of the buds, and the later leafing of the trees and shrubs, so now I follow the colorings that soon will make of this northern section at least one of orchestral coloring, lavish and dramatic — the Great Painter at work again!

How like life are these Seasons of ours — each with its definite character. All of them have their own particular beauty, but somehow the Autumn weeks out-glorify them all. Like a painter with his canvas, the Great Painter in nature works as emphasizing the shadows against the blue sky above.

And as the painter on his canvas selects the various colors to make up the whole, so does the Great Painter moment by moment keep changing and perfecting the remarkable designs and combinations that make this Autumnal glory of ours one great canvas of breath-taking beauty.

How interesting to note the progress each day. How brilliant the sun, how poetic the maples, and the quiet tones of the oak and elm. And along the roadside what a succession of colors, like one continuous poem or song. How those "perfect days" of June that Lowell wrote about are duplicated in a new dress as Autumn gets well under way!

Could humans ever have planned a parade or celebration so beautiful and dramatic as we witness in October's canvas approaching completion? Melody and mellowness are in these quiet days of Autumn with the whispering of the leaves as they finally drop their Mother Earth, there to nestle in their sleep under the Winter snows.

And then there is the harvest — the golden corn, the ripened grains, the late fruits and vegetables — God's furnishings for his created inhabitants all over the earth!

Just Folks

YES AND NO
Two little words are "yes" and "no."

Yet from them differences grow. It always causes some distress When Pa says "no" and Ma says "yes."

And two opposing views must show When Pa says "Yes" and Ma says "no."

But many a Pa has reasoned out Just what to say when he's in doubt. Then neither "yes" nor "no" he'll say.

For he has found an easier way. "Go ask your mother," he'll reply. "She has to settle this, not I."

Still better will it always be When both on "yes" and "no" agree.

Grave differences sometimes rise When Ma allows what Pa denies. Though little words are "no" and "yes."

They often cause unhappiness.

EXPECT TRUMAN TO HELP ADLAI IN NEW YORK

By ERNEST B. VACCARO
NEW YORK (AP)—Whistle stopper Harry S. Truman lends a hand to Adlai Stevenson here today in the biggest "whistle stop" of them all.

He turns his "give 'em hell" technique from the rear platform of his 16-car campaign train to a park in Harlem to try to help build up a big enough Democratic margin in New York City to overcome normal Republican majorities upstate.

Truman prefaced today's campaigning with an off-the-cuff talk in Grand Central Station last night where he got a roaring welcome and a few boos from what police said was a crowd of 20,000 persons.

Counting On Truman
He speaks first, at 1 p.m., EST, in Dorrance-Brooks Square, where, in the 1948 campaign, he brought cheers of approval from a crowd of 65,000 when he said he would fight for his civil rights program "with every ounce of strength and determination I have."

The Democratic National Committee is counting on Truman to give the Stevenson-Sparkman ticket its biggest boost of the campaign here.

Truman lost New York State's 45 electoral votes in 1948, but Henry A. Wallace's Progressive party candidacy cut heavily into normal Democratic votes among minority groups.

15-Day Tour Near End
The President will wind up his current New York appearance with another address at 10 p.m., EST, at a Columbus Day dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

He leaves immediately afterwards for Washington to wind up a 15-day, 24-state coast-to-coast tour in which he worked harder and spoke longer for another man than he did for himself in any single trip in 1948.

Truman starts out from Washington again next Wednesday night on a tour through New England ending up next Saturday night with a big speech in Brooklyn. A big Midwestern trip will wind up his campaigning.

Poured It On GOP
Truman "poured it on" the Republicans from Buffalo to New York yesterday, saying that Dwight D. Eisenhower, by his endorsement of Sen. Joseph McCarthy (R-Wis) has stooped so low he is "not fit to be trusted with the great office of president."

He told campaign crowds Eisenhower has disqualified himself for the presidency by raising questions in the campaign that "strike a blow at the morale" of free nations fighting in Korea.

It was at Utica that Truman brought up Eisenhower's endorsement of McCarthy and declared the general "betrayed his principles" and "deserted his friends."

Some Heckling
The President's trip into New York was punctuated by some boos and heckling along the way, particularly at Hudson, where teenagers carrying rival party banners scuffled among the crowd.

Many carried Eisenhower or Nixon signs, some chanted "we want Ike" and "we want Dick."

A Democratic politician snatched one big Nixon sign from a student, expressing fear "smaller children" might be hurt.

It took Truman himself to quiet them. With expert showmanship, he read a letter from the president of the high school student council advertising last night's football game there and everybody calmed down.

Tomato Was Thrown
There were other occasions of mild boing and heckling, like at Batavia, where Truman admonished the youngsters to "go home and tell your mama and papa to vote the Democratic ticket."

A tomato was thrown at Amsterdam, but it was so wide of the President he didn't even see it.

But, even where the incidents occurred, the crowds were heavily enthusiastic.

But not so loudly enthusiastic as the one that greeted him at Yorkers last night and not nearly so big and loud and enthusiastic as the one in the Grand Central Station.

"I am overwhelmed," Truman said, as he beamed his biggest smile down upon them from the balcony.

IKE TAKES BRIEF RECESS AFTER SALT LAKE CITY

DENVER (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower paused today for a brief recess in his hard-driving campaign after lashing what he called "the prevailing political practice of divide, exploit, tax, spend and rule."

Speaking last night in the Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City, the GOP presidential candidate again called for a middle-of-the-road leadership to "keep in balance the twin ideals of security and of liberty."

After this speech, he flew to Denver to rest over the week end before setting out Monday for a swing that will carry him on his third drive into the Southland—with special attention beamed on Texas.

Holding His Own
Rep. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.), former GOP national chairman, told a reporter he thought Eisenhower was "holding his own" in the campaign and the outlook still appeared promising for his election.

"He has lost some of the extreme liberal support," Scott told a reporter. "But he has gained more conservative votes to offset this loss. I think we'll see a gradual gain ahead."

Eisenhower came to Salt Lake City from a quick sweep through Arizona and New Mexico. His reception was warm but not as boisterous or as big as those he had received in California.

"Too Long In Power"
He launched into an assault on the Truman administration in the first sentence of his speech. He said after years in power it "doesn't know where it is going, is afraid it won't get there and is sure it wouldn't know what to do if it arrived."

Slamming at the party he said has been "too long in power," the general referred to the Democratic theme song—"Don't Let Them Take It Away."

He said: "If that had been the theme song of your pioneer forebears they would never have set forth on their historic pilgrimage in the first place . . . and dared to believe that, here, they could make the desert blossom like the rose."

He told the crowd he had entered politics because he became convinced the people "would welcome a change from too many bosses and too much machine politics."

"I still think you would welcome

Warn Farmers On Tractors On Road

State police of the Gettysburg substation today warned farmers that they no longer may drive farm tractors on the highways with a white light to the rear.

A new law, said Sgt. Joseph E. Temple, requires that all such tractors, when using the highways, must display a red light at the rear.

that change," he said, "a total change from the prevailing political practice of divide, exploit, tax, spend and rule. . . .

"We want to go forward—not to the right or to the left, but straight forward. We want to get rid of extremes and extremists and back on the middle way."

Developing this theme, the GOP candidate said some extremists think the more government the better.

Dictatorship Ahead
"The end of this road is dictatorship," he argued.

Then he said other extremists deny "the obligation of government to intervene on behalf of the people even when the complexities of modern life demand it."

He said: "The end of this road is dictatorship."

He went on to say: "Both extremes are wrong. Both are dangerous. One shackles man to the power of central government. The other strips him of the protection of his fellows and returns him to the law of the jungle."

In the middle way, he said, lies the answer to the strengthening of liberty and security.

Sgt. Temple said another new law affecting principally farmers, prohibits the hauling of more than one vehicle behind a truck or tractor on the highways.

In 1951 there were 9,300,000 people in the United States who were single because the spouses had died.

MOUSETRAP NOT ENOUGH NOW TO BRING WORLD TO YOUR DOORWAY

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—The world will no longer beat a path to the door of the man who makes a better mousetrap.

The world is too busy. The man who wants to peddle a better mousetrap now has to give it an alluring shape, an attractive color, a catchy name. He has to make it so irresistible that a housewife, on seeing it, says to herself:

"I have to have that very mousetrap or die. My life won't be complete without it."

Must Sell Itself

For in this supermarket era in which clerks act merely as change-makers a product has to be its own silent salesman—it has to sell itself to the customer by the way it feels or the eye appeal of its package.

This has given rise to a little-known but highly important figure in modern sales engineering—the industrial designer. One of the most successful is a young Army veteran who supervised the modification of the B29 airplane that dropped the atom bomb on Hiroshima.

At 32, Gerald Stahl is head of one of the nation's top industrial design firms, and all but two women on his staff of 13 are war veterans.

"We are a new breed in a new field," he said. "Industrial designing as a specialized profession is only about 30 years old. But already it is turning from an art into a science."

"We are trained now not only to think in terms of styling, but how a product should look and feel, how it can be made more cheaply and how it can steadily be improved. That requires a knowledge of psychology, color dynamics, market research and sales promotion techniques."

This fight for the housewife's dollar has become so competitive, Stahl said, that "there isn't a major manufacturing firm today that doesn't use an industrial designer either on its staff or on a retainer basis."

Most Are Impulse Sales
"There has been a real revolution in this respect in the last quarter century."

A housewife shopping in a supermarket usually doesn't know why she selects one package of rice from a shelf containing a half dozen brands. The reason is usually subconscious, and it is up to the industrial designer to know her own mind better than she does herself.

"A large percentage of sales now are impulse sales," Stahl said. "the product that catches their eye is the one they buy. The package that is the greatest attention-getter is the one she puts in her market basket."

Colors Important
Red, orange, and yellow have been found to be the best eye-grabbing colors. Greens and blues are fine for feminine cosmetic products. They convey a feeling of coolness. But purple, black and muddy reds repel, because they are associated with death.

"You'd never put a hand soap in a black or purple package if you wanted mass appeal," said Stahl. "And the industrial designer aims at Main Street not Fifth Avenue."

Stahl started dreaming of his own firm in war days as engineering officer in charge of the project to refit the B29 so it could handle the first huge A-bombs.

"I didn't want to work for anyone else," he said. "I wanted to sink or swim on my own."

His firm, one of only about two dozen in the country, has always had more business than he could handle. He has designed dozens of new products, ranging from safety razors and ice cream dispensers to automatic washing machines and portable refrigerators.

His wartime knowledge helped in turning out a new line of futuristic toys of tomorrow—including jet cars, interplanetary rockets, ray guns and space ships.

"It was a lot of fun," he said. "Our job was to forecast in terms of toys what the world of the year 2,000 would be like."

"It was purely blue sky stuff—out of our own heads, as ordinarily we are strictly feet-on-the-ground designers. But it looks like the world is already catching up with our toys."

Mount Grad Is U. S. Consul At Chiangmai

George M. Widney, who was graduated from Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, in 1942, has been named United States consul at Chiangmai, Thailand, according to an announcement by the State Department.

Widney has been associated with the foreign service since graduation, holding posts at Lima, Georgetown and Salonika until he was attached to the office of the U. S. political advisor with the Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean Theater in 1945. He returned to the diplomatic service at Salonika at the end of 1945 and later served at Bangkok and Saigon.

In 1951 he became vice consul at Chiangmai, and later succeeded to the consulate.

Widney is a native of Mobile, Alabama.

Riding with Russell

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
by FREDERICK C. RUSSELL
Member S.A.E.

Some drivers have the knack of making their passengers feel at home. Others simply make them wish they were.

Raising Our Sights

There would be a lot more enjoyment of cars if more owners would remember a little rule of psychology known as raising the level of consciousness. It would help prevent annoyance with miscellaneous car noises and check worry over things that probably will not cause any real delay or expense.

Some interesting tricks can be used to help us keep our mind off these distractions. One is to switch on the car radio. This will blot out noisy rattles, that tire rumbling or the grunting of dry shack. Another way of lifting the consciousness level so that only more worth while thoughts occupy our attention is to take more notice of passing sights, looking for the new in nature's beauty. It always helps overcome the sense of rough riding to change the car's rate of speed. In the old days of washboard roads drivers used to advocate driving at four miles per hour or forty. In between was just making life a wheel miserable.

There's more psychology to this than meets the eye. I always find myself interested in the car's annoyances right after I have stopped off for a good lunch. Sometimes the threshold is allowed to drop so low that I can actually feel the bumps in the road.

Note On The Clutch

At the rate automatics are coming into the picture this rule won't be useful in the not too distant future, but while the clutch still is with us don't forget that if there is dragging, and you have trouble getting into low, there will be some wear on the clutch facing even when shifting into the other gears, even though they may not indicate any difficulty.

Maybe It's "Wax Bloom"

Some of my readers have been puzzled over the appearance of wax on the sides of whitewall tires after exposure to hot sun. This is merely some of the excess wax from the white finish coming to the surface. Such wax is used to prevent cracking of the rubber. If the excess of wax is not removed by water and scouring pads it will probably pick up dirt and cause discoloration.

Mechanic Joe Speaking

"This is the time of year to watch the cooling system carefully. One of the chief mistakes to make right now is to fail to notice any dropping of the coolant level in the radiator. Unless checked this is certain to prove troublesome when anti-freeze is added."

"I think we tend to overlook this dropping if we have been in the habit of overfilling the system and have learned that unless the coolant level is kept without about two inches from the top of the overflow pipe there will be loss when expansion takes place. Having learned just where to put the level we assume the job is complete and do not bother to check frequently. Comes anti-freeze time and we are caught napping."

Delays The Start

One reason why it is more important these days to keep the battery up to par is because it has to supply both cranking power and ignition when we use the modern cranking system for starting. In the not too distant past it was possible to crank a moment or two before switching on the ignition. This helped limber up the motor, built up a little compression and the carburetion system into action. Today the job is combined and the battery has to supply cranking power and ignition simultaneously. It easily explains why the ignition is sometimes a bit too weak for prompt firing.

Quick Way To Test

One of the simplest tests for a clogged radiator core is merely to remove the hose and see how quickly water poured into the top of the radiator comes out the bottom. The force with which the water expels is also a clue. Where the bottom connection of the radiator points upwards water should spurt up about six inches into the air if the radiator is filled and water is suddenly released from the lower outlet.

Know Your Bearings

Care of front wheel bearings is a fairly standardized process, but it would be incorrect to say that there is complete uniformity in the business of adjusting front wheels for proper tightness. This is not, as some suppose, a question of whether the bearings are of the ball or the roller type. Five makes of American passenger cars are equipped with ball type front wheel bearings, the rest using roller bearings. A little more precision is specified for four of the five cars using ball bearings, and in one case where roller bearings are used it is not sufficient to adjust according to "feel" as with the other cars with roller bearings and the one with ball bearings. Where "feel" is not a sufficient gauge the rule is to tighten to a specified inch-pounds and then install the cotter pin.

Pointer On The Fan

A friend of mine thought he had done quite a neat job of cleaning out the motor pan and replacing it, but leakage of oil around the front end of the engine has left him less than enthusiastic. The engine is now rid of sludge accumulations, but he's wondering if he is due for some new trouble. I'm advising him that things are not as bad as they seem to be. He will need to take the pan down again and be a little more careful when installing it with the new gasket. This gasket on his particular car protrudes a bit at the front end. It should not be cut off.

Strangers To Overdrive

It is surprising that so many people who operate cars with overdrive do not fully understand their operation and who thus do not make use of this feature. Actually it is possible to obtain five forward speeds with overdrive, since you can use second and second overdrive for fast city driving, particularly where the cut-in speed for overdrive is in the 20 to 25 miles per hour range. A lot of motorists do not realize that cars with overdrive do not free wheel above the cut-in speed. It is the free wheeling under this speed that makes shifting without clutching possible, although not recommended.

Q When I apply the brakes the car pulls to the left. However, there doesn't seem to be anything wrong with that brake. There is no brake fluid on the lining, nor any grease or oil. H. L. K.

A Perhaps the trouble is with the opposite brake. If the right front doesn't hold the car will pull to the left. Check the right front brake for worn lining. Grease on the lining, when this first develops, will cause a brake not to hold. After the grease "cooks" it causes grabbing.

Q I seem to be getting too much noise in the hydraulic valve lifters. Have used additives but without success. Wm. L. G.

A Perhaps you have overfilled the oil pan. This results in air getting into the oil. Sometimes in using additives motorists will overfill the engine. Some of the oil should be drained off so as not to overfill.

Q The engine of my car has an odd habit of slowing down and then picking up again. Have checked the fuel pump, the carburetor and the ignition system. Any ideas on this? H. F. B.

A How about a leak in the vacuum spark control line? Air entering here may give this effect.

Q I am told that the clutch springs of my car are very weak and that the clutch probably will give me trouble when winter comes and I am caught in heavy snow. What concerns me most is how this happened and what I can do to prevent a repetition of the trouble? J. F. D.

A It is entirely possible that you have been in the habit of slipping the clutch. This causes heat, and weakens the springs. If the clutch springs look bluish this indicates that their temper has been drawn by the heat.

Q The engine of my car ought to provide a lot better acceleration than it does. I have tried all the tricks, but to no avail. Other cars of the same make and series give much better performance. So I know that the engine doesn't need any power equipment added. Can you suggest anything I may have overlooked? J. J. H., Jr.

A I would take a good look at the flexible fuel line between the main fuel line and the pump. This may collapse when the pump is pulling at maximum, thus cutting down on the fuel supply to the carburetor at times when the engine needs it most.

Q If my reaction time is  $\frac{1}{2}$  second and the car is traveling 40 miles per hour, how far will the car move before the brakes go into action? What if the reaction time is  $\frac{3}{4}$  second? R. W.

A In the first instance the car will travel 29  $\frac{1}{2}$  feet. In the second case it will move 44 feet before the slow-down begins.

Q There's quite a bit of wander and weave in my car, in spite of a good front-end alignment. B. M. McN.

A The drag line may have weak springs.

Passenger Cars Decorated At Christmastime; Caboose Was Painted Red, White and Blue

This is the tenth in a series of 11 articles on railroading in Adams County.

One of the last timetables issued by the Reading Railroad shows that the last Harrisburg train left Gettysburg at 5:45 a.m. and reached here on the return trip at 7:15 p.m. Northbound, the train arrived in Biglerville at 6:06 a.m.; Gardners at 6:20 a.m. and Harrisburg at 7:40 a.m.

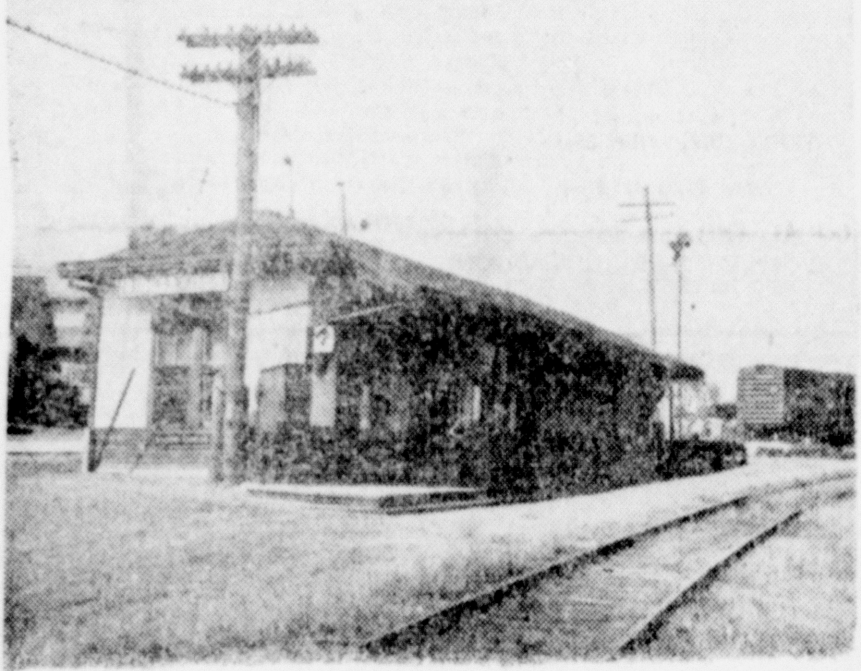

It left Harrisburg at 5:20 p.m. The round trip fare in 1942 was $1. Many shoppers from Gettysburg and along the line, and commuters employed in Harrisburg used this passenger service until automobiles became more numerous. Its last trip from Harrisburg to Gettysburg filled the passenger cars as they had not been filled in years — county residents made the trip in a sort of nostalgic farewell to a line which had served them well until forced to discontinue passenger service for lack of adequate patronage.

Six years ago 21 passengers made the trip on the last Gettysburg-Harrisburg branch passenger train to operate from Gettysburg to the state capital. It was the end of an era. Many of these 21 passengers were to take their final ride over the G and H that same evening, but the final trip from Harrisburg back to Gettysburg was a different occasion. In the morning it was a business trip. In the evening the cars were crowded and in a more holiday mood. The passengers were there to describe to their children and their grandchildren the last ride on the G and H.

Hartzell Was Conductor

It had been the practice for some time for a crew to take the early morning passenger train to Harrisburg, and return in the afternoon with a freight train. Mahlon P. Hartzell, now retired, was the conductor of this crew. Morris L. Fleagle, Harrisburg, who then lived in Lincoln (Center) Square, was in charge of a freight train which left Gettysburg later in the day. His crew brought the evening passenger train back to Gettysburg.

Mr. Hartzell was with the Read-

The Reading Railroad, which provides freight contact north of Gettysburg at Carlisle and Harrisburg, was built from Hunter's Run to Gettysburg in 1884 and was known then as the Gettysburg and Harrisburg Railroad. Just outside Gettysburg the locomotive, the "Jay Cooke," halted, while officials drove two golden spikes, signifying completion of this new carrier route. For the first time, Biglerville, Bendersville, Gardners and other communities north of Gettysburg had rail service, both freight and passenger. Passenger service was abandoned a few years ago. ## New Oxford

NEW OXFORD—Mr. and Mrs. Newlin C. Jones, who recently moved to town after living several months at East Berlin, have affiliated with St. Paul's Reformed Church, having been received on October 5.

The Rev. Philip J. Gergen, new pastor of the local Catholic parish, has announced that confessions will now be heard each Saturday at 3:30 p.m. and again Saturday evening at 6:30.

Mrs. James R. Weaver and Mrs. Clyde Bevenour had charge of the benefit card party sponsored by the Rosary Society of the local Catholic church, at the parochial hall October 8. This was the third such party of a series of six.

Women of the parish who have not yet joined the church's Rosary Society, an organization affiliated with the Rosary Archconfraternity, will be received Sunday evening, October 19, with appropriate services at the church followed by a business meeting and social for new members at the parochial hall. Each matron of the parish is urged to join this group.

A new series of benefit parties, with games and refreshments, open to the public, began Thursday evening at the local fire hall under the auspices of the fire company for the benefit of the building fund. At the party on November 6, a turkey will be awarded.

Smokey Says:

ing from November 17, 1899 until his retirement on January 1, 1947. Another veteran of the G and H is Samuel Weiser, also of Gettysburg, who is also retired.

There was was nothing "stuffy" about this branch line, even down to its final day of passenger service. It was known as the "friendly line." Mr. Fleagle originated the custom of decorating the passenger cars at Christmas time, about 1941. The trains had a habit of stopping almost any place along the line. The story is told that on one stop, to pick up a cow, the train crew had to chase the animal through a field and capture it before it could be loaded and the train could continue.

Had Rainpouts

When the morning passenger train left Gettysburg, a freight caboose went along to be brought back with the afternoon freight. Fleagle, a veteran railroader, had caboose No. 92813. Both conductors took great pride in their cabooses. Fleagle's was painted in very unorthodox, for cabooses, colors on the interior — red, white and blue. He won a special commendation from the president of the railroad. It was the only caboose on the Reading with rainpouts over the roof front and rear.

Most "passenger trains" on the G and H were mixed trains, consisting of locomotive, baggage, passenger, and freight cars and caboose.

The morning train from Gettysburg in the latter years of its existence carried few passengers from this town. Often the train pulled away from the Reading Station on N. Washington St., with only two or three passengers, but when it reached Harrisburg it might have between 40 and 50. They boarded the train all along the line, more the nearer the train approached Harrisburg.

Many protests arose when the Reading proposed to discontinue this passenger service, but the railroad contended that its operation cost $45,000 a year, and the revenue was only, it said, approximately $4,400. With the discontinuance of rail passenger service, motor buses were substituted.

FACTS ABOUT TERMITE CONTROL

Many erroneous theories about wood-eating termites plus numerous impractical and unworkable ideas about their prevention and control add up to the alarming truth that these insects cost American home owners many millions of dollars annually to make necessary building repairs and to combat the foe. Below are suggested a few simple yet important steps in meeting and solving the termite problem.

Termites are not ants. They are not even related to ants. The winged forms which are seen in the spring and occasionally in early fall are the reproductive adults which have come forth from the underground colony to mate and form new colonies. These may be easily distinguished from winged ants by two features: (1) Winged termites have two pairs of whitish, opaque wings of equal length while winged ants have two pairs of wings but of unequal length; (2) The winged termite has a heavy waistline; the winged ant's waistline is extremely slender.

The presence of termites in a building cannot be detected by telltale wood cuttings or any other evidence left from their feeding. There are, in fact, two main methods by which to detect them. First, there are always earthen tubes extending from the soil (near where the colony is located) to the lowest exposed timber where the termites enter to feed. These tubes are usually fastened to the inside foundation in basementless buildings or up the outside of inside of walls where there are basements. They are also found on bases of chimneys or piers or fastened to water or drainage pipes entering the ground beneath buildings.

The second means of detection is not nearly so certain as the first. It consists of examining foundation timbers with an ice pick, pointed knife or other similar tool to discover galleries in the wood. Rarely is evidence of their feeding seen on timber surfaces.

One of the most simple and effective ways to destroy termites already feeding in a building is to remove the earthen tubes. Where this is impossible, the soil colonies may be exterminated by applying sodium arsenite, DDT or pentachlorophenol along the foundation wall and around chimney and pier bases and pipes.

For this role sodium arsenite is dissolved in water at the rate of one pound of powder to one gallon of water.

DDT for this purpose consists of a 50 per cent wettable powder dissolved in No. 2 fuel oil at the rate of 14 ounces to one gallon of oil. Pentachlorophenol may be purchased at a 5 per cent strength, which is the strength to use or as a 1-10 concentrate which is mixed at the rate of one part to ten parts of No. 2 fuel oil.

To apply any of these three solutions, dig a trench about a foot wide and slightly less than a foot deep along basementless foundation walls, exposing the wall and considerably deeper where there are basements. Apply one of the solutions by sprinkling liberally along the bottom of the trench, tramping in a few inches replaced soil and applying another sprinkling of the solution until the trench is filled and all the soil is uniformly impregnated with the poison. The trench and application should extend five feet each way from where colonies are known to be located by their earthen tubes. Use 2 gallons of the sodium arsenite solution or 4 gallons of DDT solution or 5 gallons of the pentachlorophenol solution to 10 linear feet of trench.

If possible, apply one of the poisons in a narrow trench along the inside of foundation walls and around chimney and pier bases.

resources. Thus, at this time of the year countless thousands of crops rot unharvested in fields and gardens, despite the appalling truth that more than two-thirds of the world's billions are hungry. This discussion does not pertain to our national roles in international philanthropy but it does suggest means by which rural and urban families may wisely save and store much of the food supply that is wasting and which we may conceivably need in the months ahead.

Urban dwellers are included in this advice because there are many opportunities to buy surplus supplies of vegetables and fruits from in surrounding regions and store them for all-winter consumption. It is important for non-farm families to learn more about the simple methods of food crop burial in outdoor mounds. It is not too late for town and city folks to hustle out into the countryside to buy apples which are now rotting under thousands of trees and dry or can them.

Potatoes, carrots, parsnips, beets, rutabagas, turnips, salsify, cabbage, and celery may be stored inexpensively all winter by proper outdoor burial. Of course, as previously emphasized here, burial mounds should be equipped with ventilating flues to carry off surplus moisture, especially during the first few weeks after burial.

For a small family supply all the mentioned vegetables may be buried in one mound, thereby necessitating but one opening during inclement weather to obtain small stores of all crops. A barrel on its side makes a handy receptacle for such smallscale burial.

Of course, where larger supplies of these crops are buried, it is advisable to make two or more small mounds of each. But again, one mound of mixed vegetables remains desirable for emergency purposes when winter weather is rough.

Dry straw, hay and other dry vegetation should be used to form a liberal layer under and over the conical or ridged heap, with a sufficient layer of soil to hold the vegetation in place and to shed water. Later, before cold weather arrives, enough additional soil should be added to insure freedom from freezing.

Cabbage may be simply buried by pulling the plants up by hand and turning the heads upside down on the ground and covering them individually with soil. Slight freezing does little harm. Larger supplies of cabbage may be buried by making a trench 6 to 10 inches deep and 3 to 5 feet wide. In this the plants are taken up by the roots and set close together as if they were being transplanted, with moist soil firmed around the roots. Boards are placed along the sides of the pit, fastened to stakes and high enough to clear the tops of the heads by 2 to 4 inches. Before freezing weather arrives the sides are banked with soil and with poles placed crosswise the cabbage is protected above by heaping dry vegetation over the pit. The ends are left open for ventilation until cold weather nears. Of course, complete freedom from standing water is necessary.

Late celery may be stored over winter by the same general method of pit burial.

GROWING EASTER LILIES

Despite the fact that the so-called Easter lily can be purchased in full bloom immediately before the date that lends its name to this beautiful flower, many house plant growers seek annually for information to enable them to grow their own plants at home. Under average household conditions the task is not an easy one. But the American gardening spirit of adventure is willing to cope with such obstacles. Therefore, because of the time factor in bringing this plant into bloom, details are offered now.

Failure to allow enough time for the potted bulbs to develop strong roots before top growth is forced is the point on which most beginners err in attempts to grow this lily. Bulbs must be potted 18 to 20 weeks before the desired date of bloom. For example, to have this plant in bloom April 1 requires potting of the bulbs around the first week in November. For several years the editor has been recommending a 20-week period for this task.

The "what" often puzzles inexperienced growers. To enable growers to avoid mistakes on this point we give the full and correct botanical name. It is Lilium longiflorum giganteum. This is the large white lily commonly called Easter lily. And by the way, this is an extremely tender species and cannot be grown outdoors.

Now the "when" and the "what" logically lead to the important "how." Here advice must be strictly studied. First, obtain thoroughly dry and weathered cattle manure from a summer pasture and pulverize it. Mix this with fertile loam scraped from the under side of a heavy old sod, including some of the fibrous roots — one part (by volume) of manure with three parts loam and approximately one part sand. Sift the mixture several times.

Use 6-inch clay pots and buy the most vigorous bulbs available. Pot one to a container, firming the soil carefully around the bulbs and watering liberally to settle the soil. The bulb should be completely covered after the soil settles but not covered deep. Be certain the pot is well drained.

Immediately after potting, place the pots on a wooden base in a snug coldframe, abandoned hot-bed, or a dark, cool cellar and cover them liberally with peat moss, fine straw, hay or other dry vegetation. The pots should remain in darkness and free from freezing temperatures until they are filled with roots. Then they are brought out to force top growth. Approximately 13 weeks should be allowed from the time pots are brought out until full bloom time.

A greenhouse or a room where the light is subdued is best at this stage. Strong light or direct sun is harmful. The temperature should remain around 45 to 50 degrees at night and slightly higher during the day. After then days raise the night temperature to 60 degrees and the day temperature to 70. During this top forcing period the soil should be kept moist but never wet.

When flower buds appear, water the plants with manure water — one-half bushel of cow manure in 25 gallons of water. If growth is slow, add 1 to 1 1/4 pounds of nitrate of soda to the 25 gallons of water.

The editor invites all questions readers may wish to ask about the culture of this beautiful indoor lily.

• WHAT Manner OF DRIVER ARE YOU? •

A man who is rude in everyday life is looked upon as a boor. Most people avoid him.

But many a man, who wouldn't dream of pushing people out of his way, will think nothing of driving past another car under unsafe conditions on the highway. This is a far more serious and deadly form of rudeness.

You wouldn't think of hogging all the food set on the table—yet how many times do you hog the road? You wouldn't bang down the telephone receiver during a conversation —yet how many times do you try to beat a traffic light?

We think you get the idea. If you use the same good manners while driving that you use in everyday living—life on our highways will be safer. For a large percentage of traffic accidents are caused by plain bad manners.

Your very life may depend on good manners behind the wheel. After all—it is just another way of following the great "unwritten" laws of highway safety—control... caution... courtesy!

This message in the interest of highway safety is one of a series prepared and disseminated by the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association and the Pennsylvania Department of Revenue.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson promised today to deal "ruthlessly" with corruption in government if he is elected president.

The Illinois governor brought his campaign into politically doubtful Florida today after New Orleans recorded mixed reaction last night to his firm stand for civil rights legislation and against giving the states title to the oil-rich submerged coastal lands.

Bargaining into the tough issues Republicans have raised against him, the Democratic presidential nominee likened Miami's cleanup action in gambling scandals to money he had taken in Illinois. He promised to "follow the same pattern of action in Washington," if he wins on Nov. 4.

Touched By Scandal

"You have been touched by scandals bred by an unsavory alliance between a national criminal syndicate and the semi-legitimate operators who cluster around the fringes of the entertainment business," Stevenson said in a talk prepared for a party rally at Bay Front Park.

"But I was pleased to see that you have learned the practical lesson taught me in my time as governor of Illinois—that corruption will not wait for leisurely attention."

"It must be attacked by those in authority and it must be ruthlessly rooted out before it has a chance to fester and spread through the whole of our political system."

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, the Republican presidential nominee, has made alleged corruption in government one of his chief talking points in the campaign. Other Republicans have aimed barbs at Stevenson for disclosures that horsemeat was sold as beef in Illinois and that state tax stamps were counterfeited.

Stevenson said he knew that honest criticism could be made of the Democratic national administration.

"I claim that our Democratic leaders are and have been pretty good human beings—but I make no claim to infallibility on their behalf."

Contrast With Depression

As he did in campaigning in Oklahoma and Louisiana yesterday, the Illinois governor emphasized what he said were Democratic contributions to the country's prosperity. He called attention to the difference between conditions now and in the depression of 20 years ago when the Republicans were in power.

This approach, linked with his advocacy of civil rights and his opposition to state ownership of the submerged coastal lands left Democrats in Louisiana wondering if he had helped or hurt his chances of obtaining that state's 10 electoral votes. Louisiana gave its 10 votes to the States Rights ticket in 1948.

Florida has eight electoral votes and Eisenhower has been bidding strongly to break into the South by carrying that state.

In Nashville Tonight

The core of Stevenson's argument was that despite Democratic mistakes the voter should make his decision by measuring the world as he knows it today against what it was 20 years ago.

After a scheduled midafternoon appearance in Tampa, Stevenson planned a major talk in Nashville, Tenn., tonight before flying back to his headquarters at Springfield, Ill.

The Democratic nominee gave his New Orleans listeners the kind of a speech they didn't especially want to hear.

Mustered Weak Cheer

In an area where the civil rights issue is politically touchy, he said flatly he stands on the Democratic platform's declaration for the elimination of racial discrimination and for a change in the Senate rules which have allowed filibusters to kill civil rights bills.

The crowd mustered only a weak cheer for this statement.

Stevenson's own entourage encountered a civil rights problem when James Hicks, Negro reporter for the Afro-American newspaper in New York, Newark, Philadelphia, Washington and Richmond, Va., quit the accompanying press corps when he was denied a room at the Roosevelt Hotel where other reporters stayed.

William Flanagan, Stevenson's information director, said the nominee knew nothing about the incident. He reminded reporters that Stevenson had nothing to do with operation of the hotel.
